Definition

A family project is a ministry or mission operation run by a family or group of close friends. While the project supports the family, its primary purpose is ministry. Usually it would not have a not-for-profit status. These projects may be linked to or founded by former/present students or workers of an OCI ministry. They may also have been started without former connection to OCI, but based on the same goals.

Our Purpose

OCI is a family of lay ministries supporting the Seventh-day Adventist Church. As the need and invitation arise, OCI assists its members with counsel, matches workers with needs, trains new leaders, acts as a liaison with church leadership, evaluates and helps solve problems, and more. OCI acts as the U.S. contact and home base for expatriate workers at mission outposts for ministries in approximately thirty countries. OCI is also a member of Adventist-laymen Services and Industries (ASI).

As an organization desiring to spread the Gospel, our aim is to work in harmony with the Bible, the writings of Ellen G. White, and the teachings of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. Those organizations desiring to join OCI will need to be in agreement with this and the following criteria.

Participation before Membership

An organization requesting membership in OCI may submit an application with the recommendation of two board members or two leaders in an OCI member organization, or with two individuals who have had significant interaction with OCI. An organization requesting membership in OCI must be in operation for at least one year.

Financial Stewardship

OCI members refuse to solicit or to accept tithe from Seventh-day Adventist church members. OCI members are to avoid debt. Debt, if incurred, should be repaid as a first priority. Failure to honor financial commitments would jeopardize the status of your OCI membership.

Documentation Required

Applicants for membership must provide copies of their operating policies (including policies regarding minimum moral and lifestyle standards) if available. Also send in a completed OCI Associate Membership Application, including the signed health guidelines document.

Once the completed application is received with the supporting documents, they will be reviewed by the OCI Executive Committee, and will be brought with their recommendations to the next meeting of the Board of Directors.

Membership and Administration Fees

To help facilitate OCI's continued growth, each member is expected to pay an annual membership fee and an administration fee for donation processing.* The fees are as follows:

- Associate member ministries—$50 annually
- Administration fee—1.5% of donations processed

The membership fee will go toward the work of the OCI field vice presidents, enabling them to better serve their regions. The purpose of the fee is to provide a way for each ministry to be actively involved in the worldwide family of OCI.

The administration fee helps defray the cost of providing financial services to member ministries.

A non-refundable application fee of $75 is required with the submission of this application. The membership fee is due the first January 1 following membership approval by the OCI Board.*

Loss of Membership

Members who fail to comply with the conditions of membership may be removed or suspended from OCI by a decision of the executive committee or board.

How long has your ministry been in existence?

In what way do you see your organization participating in the annual activities of OCI?
(OCI Retreat, ASI conventions, OCI mission trips, etc.)

What is your relationship to the Seventh-day Adventist Church?

Please list two leaders working with or closely associated with OCI who would be a reference for your organization.

Does your ministry have any debt? If so, how much?

Please include the following with your application:

- ✓ Any printed matter concerning your organization (i.e. policy manual, handbook)
- ✓ Signed Health Guidelines document.
- ✓ A check for the non-refundable application fee of $75.

When completed, please return to:

OCI Health & Wellness Ministry Guidelines

OCI supports the mission and the ministry of the Seventh-day Adventist church and seeks to promote its work through medical missionary evangelism—executed with integrity, excellence, transparency, caring, and respect.

OCI recognizes that through inspiration and science, God—the Creator and Savior—has provided a wealth of counsel regarding health and health evangelism. However, the world is in the midst of a great controversy between Christ and Satan, which has affected all aspects of human life, including health practices and the treatment of illness.

With this in mind, OCI seeks to promote adherence to God’s principles of health and healing among its affiliated ministries, recognizing and rejoicing that as an international organization, a great diversity of thought and details in practice exist regarding health and the treatment of disease. OCI upholds medical practices that are rational and soundly based on the principles of physiology and basic health sciences, while avoiding those practices rooted in non-Christian philosophies and beliefs.

OCI believes in promoting a healthful lifestyle for the purpose of preventing and reversing the chronic diseases of modern society. This is aided by current medical knowledge and the use of physiological and scientific natural remedies. Healthful practices such as pure air, sunlight, abstemiousness, rest, exercise, proper diet, the use of water, and trust in divine power are among God’s approved remedies. The intelligent use of herbs and clinically indicated pharmacological medications, and the skillful practice of surgery are among the means that God has put at our disposal to promote and restore health.

Considering all of the above, OCI member ministries agree to practice the following guiding principles when providing health and wellness services.

Guiding Principles

1. Health and wellness ministries should be run by faithful Seventh-day Adventist members.
2. The foundation of all prevention, diagnosis, and treatments should be based on the following criteria:
 - a. Biblical principles and their expansion in the Spirit of Prophecy should be taken as the primary basis of healthcare decisions.
 - b. Secondly, a sound understanding of anatomy, physiology, pathophysiology, and other basic health sciences should help to guide all health and wellness services.
 - c. Thirdly, evidence-based methods of disease prevention, diagnosis, treatment, and maintenance of health should be utilized as far as possible.
 - d. Fourthly, medical care should be in harmony with the local health regulations—as long as it does not conflict with the Bible and the Spirit of Prophecy. OCI believes that it is not ethical for its members to use titles like physician, doctor, or nurse if they do not have the appropriate certification and training.

1. Modalities that do not fit into the above categories may be further broken down into two levels:
 - a. Practices that are not acceptable under any circumstances
These include, but are not limited to: Energy alignments and forces, acupuncture, hypnotherapy, iridology, reflexology, magnetism, yoga, tai chi, reiki, homeopathy, cranial sacral therapy, exclusively eating raw foods for a prolonged period of time, pendulum diagnostics, live blood analysis and other similar blood analysis, colonics as repetitive/primary therapy, urine therapy, Bach's flowers, etc.
 - b. Practices that may be used sparingly or with caution
These include untested herbal treatments, unproven diets, and current treatment modalities still undergoing research.
2. Protocol for pursuing experimental tests include:
 - a. Inform patients/clients that the suggested treatment modality is still experimental or it's efficacy has not been proven and obtain written consent from the patient or client before implementing it.
 - b. Educate patients / clients in regard to the reasons why such treatment modality is being offered (results from research, anecdotal experiences, etc). Such modalities should not be contrary to the Bible, the Spirit of Prophecy, and known physiological and health sciences' principles.
 - c. Keep detailed records and develop a database to evaluate results.

See more detailed information and footnotes on the OCI website under "Membership."
